Sunglasses design students can get some practical design faces with the right proportion starting with a glasses model, which is included on the download page 2. Be sure to emphasize them that your face needs to look younger than circles, and no bigger. In other words, the temples should not be seen, otherwise it will seem that they simply don't fit very well. Students who start by drawing a complete oval all the way around the glasses will have what I used to call a "Charlie Brown" head, and look out of proportion until they correct it. (Spoken from the experience.) Preview of the pencil Materials pencil Tutorial step by step. The Ticonderoga brand are the most reliable and pleasant dark lines when you need it, and are the easiest to cancel. Buying those pre-sharpened save teachers engaged a lot of time. Eraser. The great ones that you can hold in your hand do a job much better than only the chancellor pencil, especially when by erasing the pencil lines to the left after the track. Black Sharpie Marker. These fine point penne marker pens make beautiful black contours, have a good tip for coloring, and never bleed when they bathe. Use them with good ventilation and add more card to protect your tables. Prang Crayons. These are a bit softer than other crayons so that sometimes they look like oil pastels. They also have a nice brown toning that CRAYOLA is unable to buy their larger boxes. Crayola Crayons. The reliable brand that always works well. The package 24 has some of my favorite orange orange and yellow colors that look a bit richer and warmer than those that prang has. Directions Time required: 1 hour. How to draw a glass portrait Print the model on page 2 and track. Draw the lower curve of the face. Add your hair. Adjust as necessary for other styles. Draw the neck and shoulders. Add a neckline as desired. If you need a longer hair, add it before or behind your shoulders. Draw a nose and a mouth. Draw things inside the glasses. Track with a marker and a color. Sunglasses can serve more purposes. At the basic level, they are designed to protect your eyes from the harmful rays of the sun. On the other hand, they can be an elegant fashion accessory above that. Because of this, they can come into many different designs and styles, and can be fun to design your sunglasses. When you do this, learn to draw sunglasses will allow you to make your designs customized! At the end of this guide, you will be ready to do just that! This step-by-step guide on how to draw sunglasses will show you how to have fun while you do your fantastic designs! How to draw sunglasses à € " Step 1 To kick off this guide on how to design sunglasses, we will start with the lens on the left side of the glasses. To do this, we're drawing a rounded triangle for the lens itself. Then, once you have that lens you can use another curved line above it for the frame, the objective is is is That's all there is to do in this step, so let's move on to step two! Step 2 Draw the rest of the frame for the left lens Now that you have started drawing the left side of your sunglasses, you can finish the frame in this step of the guide. To do this, you use another curved line to create the bottom of the eyeglass frame, as shown in the reference image. This will end on the left side of the sunglasses, and we'll start with the rest of the sunglasses in the next steps. Step 3 "Now Draw the Right Side of Sunglasses You have drawn a side of the shadows in this guide on how to draw sunglasses so far, so drawing the right side should be easier! This side will be quite similar to the lens on the left side, but the angle will be slightly different this time. We won't be drawing the top of the frame yet, but we'll be drawing it very soon once we move on. Step 4 "Next. Draw the Sunglasses Stick In this fourth step of the sunglasses design, you will finish the frame on the right lens and add the sunglasses stick. First, use some curved lines to draw the top of the frame, as you can see in our reference image. The next part of the glasses we're going to design is called Temple, and that's what goes over the ears to keep the glasses on your face. To draw this part of your sunglasses, draw straight lines that will end with curved lines at the end. Step 5 "Now you can finish the other temple of sunglasses In this fifth step of our guide on how to design sunglasses, we will add the last details and elements of sunglasses. Once we have added the final part, as well as any additional details, you will be ready to color your design in the final stage. First, we will design the second temple of glasses. Because of the angle, this temple will be slightly more curved than the other. With that temple, the design is complete! Before you go any further, however, you can add some details and items of your own that you may want, This is a step where you can really let your creativity flow, but we'll also look at some ideas you might try. We mentioned creating your own designs earlier in the guide, and you could use what you learned in this guide to adapt it and create your own design. If you have a favorite pair of sunglasses then you could try recreating them in this design. You could also add some accessories to your glasses or draw some other objects next to it. If you feel ambitious, you could also draw yourself wearing this pair of sunglasses! What other ideas do you have for This design? Step 6 "Finding your sunglasses design with a little color At this final stage of drawing your sunglasses, you will be able to finish it with some amazing colors! We used a nice red for the frame of sunglasses with some shades of blue for the lens. Slow.This is what we have chosen for our example, but now you can show us which of your favorite colors you think is suitable for this design. Sunglasses can come in many different styles and color variations, so this gives you a lot of freedom with how you can color in this image. You could also experiment with different artistic tools and means to help bring colors to life. Using means such as acrylic paints and colored pens you can create colors that pop out of the page. On the other hand, means such as watercolors or coloured pencils can help create a more soft and classic atmosphere. Whatever you choose will be great, and we look forward to seeing what you will do! Using this tutorial, you can draw any glass. Actually, all glasses differ only in shape. Today we will show you how to depict this accessory using the example of the legendary Ray-Ban glasses. So let's start this tutorial and learn how to draw glasses! Step 1 Remember that in the early stages you should try not to press too strong on the pencil. Then draw the contours of the lenses "note their size and shape. According to the rules of the linear perspective, the lens closest to us should be larger than the farther. Now draw the temples of the glasses. Note that towards the tips, the temples should bend down. The very essence of the first two steps of this lesson is the same: «You should sketch the conditional skeleton of the design of the glasses. Phase 3 The guide lines of the glasses are drawn. Now,From these lines, add volume to glasses. Here it is not necessary to press too strong on the pencil, but you should try to transmit the contours of the glasses. Step 4 is the final step. Delete the additional guidelines and add details to the design of glasses. After that, add some shadows, to make your work more bulky. And it's not true. real. To add lights to lenses. Add some details such as screws and decorative elements to the sides. Thus, the glass drawing lesson came to an end. We tried to make this guide as simple as possible, so that even the most inexperienced artists could learn to draw glasses. We have divided this instruction into four very simple passages, each of which is composed of very simple lines. Try to improve your glasses design capacities. To do what is necessary to repeatedly draw the object, but with different angles, with different nuances and with different references compared to the glasses of our example.
